IntroDrink Expands Natural Cosmetics and Superfoods Range for Swiss Wellness Market

August 10, 2026

Zurich, Zurich - August 10, 2026 -
IntroDrink, a Swiss online shop specializing in premium natural supplements, vitamins, superfoods, and natural cosmetics, has broadened its product selection in response to rising consumer interest in natural health products across Switzerland. The expansion reflects a broader shift among Swiss consumers toward purity, bioavailability, and naturally sourced ingredients.

Recent consumer behavior in the wellness sector points to a growing preference for natural alternatives over synthetic formulations. IntroDrink has observed this trend across multiple categories, from immune system support to beauty and anti-aging products. The updated range now spans a wider selection of superfoods, including manuka honey, barley grass, acai, moringa, hemp protein, and chia seeds, alongside an extended line of natural cosmetics such as tallow-based skincare, Aleppo soap, shea butter, argan oil, and jojoba oil.

The company reports that immune system support products, including vitamin C, zinc, beta-glucan, elderberry, and quercetin, remain among the categories with the steadiest demand. Beauty and anti-aging supplements such as collagen, hyaluronic acid, biotin, and astaxanthin have also gained attention as consumers look for products that support skin, hair, and nail health through natural ingredients.

Bioavailability continues to be a central focus of the product range available at introdrink.ch. The selection emphasizes forms of vitamins and minerals that the body can absorb efficiently, including magnesium citrate, vitamin D3 combined with K2, and ionic minerals. This approach reflects a wider movement within the wellness sector toward ingredient quality and measurable purity rather than volume alone.

Beyond individual products, the shop offers curated wellness bundles designed around specific health goals such as immune power, beauty glow, detox, and energy. These bundles group complementary products together for consumers seeking a structured approach to daily wellness. Categories addressing sleep and relaxation, featuring ingredients such as ashwagandha, valerian, and L-theanine, and fitness and performance nutrition, including creatine, BCAA, and electrolytes, round out the range.

Education remains a component of the company's approach, with a blog offering science-based content on ingredient function, adaptogenic herbs, and natural health themes. Adaptogens and functional mushrooms, including rhodiola, maca, cordyceps, reishi, and lion's mane, form part of a plant compounds category that has drawn increased interest among Swiss consumers seeking natural support for stress and cognitive wellness.

The expanded range at IntroDrink reflects a market in which natural cosmetics and superfoods are increasingly viewed as part of an integrated wellness routine rather than isolated purchases. By combining supplements, vitamins, minerals, plant compounds, and natural cosmetics under a single Swiss online shop, the company aims to serve consumers seeking naturally sourced options across categories.

IntroDrink is a Swiss online retailer offering premium natural supplements, vitamins, superfoods, minerals, plant compounds, and natural cosmetics. The company focuses on high-quality, natural ingredients with an emphasis on purity and bioavailability, and provides vegan and organic options across its range. Its product catalog is complemented by an educational blog featuring science-based health content for the Swiss market.
